

NEW BELGRADE
WORKSHOP

Designing housing and city
transformations – Novi Beograd

01 - 05. JUNE 2017.

ETH Zurich & University of Belgrade meeting
BELGRADE

OVERVIEW

The goal of the workshop is to emphasize opportunities for the activation and re-adaptation of New Belgrade's modernist housing and open space legacy and to present initiatives concerned with encouraging economic, environmental and social aspects of urban development.

The workshop will gather around representatives from academia, the public sector, experts from practice and students of different levels of study in order to foster a multi-disciplinary, inter-sectorial and divergent thinking engaged with both "bottom - up" and "top - down" approaches to urban development.

Workshop explores the possibilities of application these innovative concepts to the modernist legacy of New Belgrade. Block 21 is a representative example of Belgrade's large-scale residential settlement built in 1966 according to modernist principles and created under the cultural influences of socialist ideology.

Today, in the period of post-socialist transition, numerous ideas for the transformation of New Belgrade emerged, however, no adequate solutions have been found so far. The selected case study of Block 21 represents an urban laboratory where the participants will explore the possibilities of spatial improvement of the New Belgrade without disturbing the integrity of the architectural and urban expression.

The results of the workshop should develop design and planning solutions for housing units and open spaces in order to improve the urban and life quality of the citizens.
